❖ INTRODUCTION

In the current situation it is very difficult to survive and only financially sound mills can survive. There are only two ways to survive in the market, one is low margin, high volume and the second one is innovation i.e. launching of new products in the market and for that we have to give continuous attention on research and development.

Textiles are one of basic needs of human. There may be ups and down in the economy, but textile will remain in existence; because it is one of the basic needs. In past few years. It has been said that there is a slump in the textile industry and many textile units were closed down during this phase. All these units, which are mainly sick units and was not due to sluggish market conditions, but poor management, because if we see per capital consumption not only in India, but also in the world, is increased substantially in the past few years. It shows that there is continuously increasing trend in the textile industry. The overall production of Cotton Bales, Cotton Yarn, etc is continuously increasing.

Textile industry's growth is significant looking into the growth of population and growth of economy. Indian economy, which is growing up @ 5% annually and India is the second largest country by population in the world market for textile products in long run.
